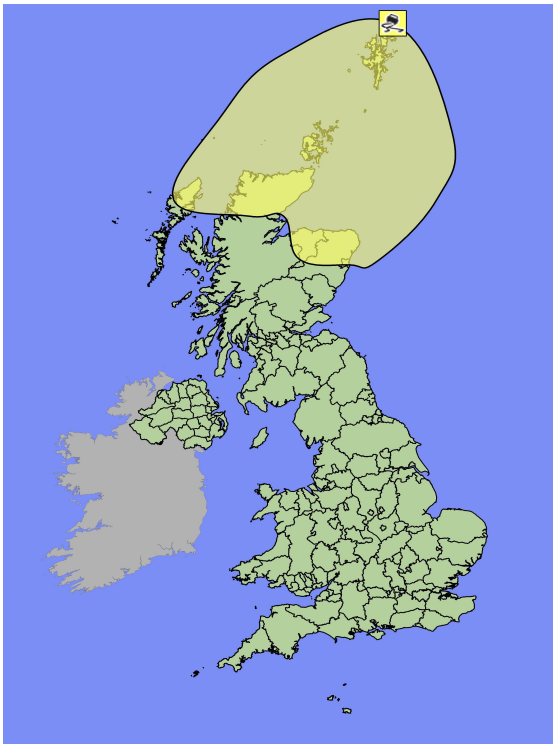
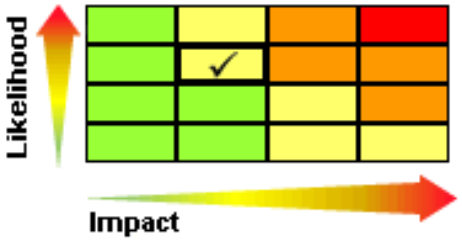
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A very cold burst of arctic air arrives over Scotland during the course of Thursday, with a wintry mixture of showers quickly following to the northeast. As temperatures fall away overnight into Friday, this is likely to bring some of the first winter problems for travellers.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 18:00 on Thu, 25th Oct 2012 until 09:00 on Fri, 26th Oct 2012

As temperatures fall below zero on Thursday evening and Friday morning, icy stretches are likely to form on any untreated routes still wet from earlier showers.
Some snow is also likely to settle, mainly on highest routes, where a few centimetres could accumulate.

The public should be aware of possible difficult travel conditions.
